Director's Foreword

P. ANTHONY PRESTON

Welcome to this Winter issue of Bulletin. Sadly, this is my last foreword, as I have decided to retire as Director, after more than a decade in a position which has been both challenging and rewarding.

When I came to Christchurch in July 1995, we were ensconced in the old Robert McDougall Art Gallery in the Botanic Gardens. While a handsome building, the institution's needs had long outgrown the facility, and I was appointed to raise the funds and manage the project that now sees us in our superb new building. Be proud of the Christchurch Art Gallery, and the achievements we have made since we opened just three years ago. It stands as a tribute to the generosity of so many Cantabrians, and I wish to record my appreciation to you all, for without your support and belief in the project it would never have eventuated, and remained – as it had for many decades – a subject for occasional, and usually fractious, debate.

This winter, as I leave the Gallery, we open a highlight of the year's programme, and the last international exhibition I secured, Cecil Beaton: Portraits. Exclusive to Christchurch, this glamorous exhibition of portraits by society photographer and designer Cecil Beaton is a celebration of style. It features such luminaries as Marilyn Monroe, Audrey Hepburn, the Rolling Stones, Marlon Brando and Andy Warhol, bringing the red-carpet glitterati of the twentieth century to our Gallery. Entirely appropriately in this issue, art critic Andrew Paul Wood explores the art of 'camp' in Beaton's photography.

Also this quarter, the Gallery hosts a spectacular retrospective exhibition of Julia Morison's work. Titled a loop around a loop, it surveys the major pieces from her career, to date. Created in partnership with the Dunedin Public Art Gallery, the exhibition opens in Christchurch on 21 July, and Jennifer Hay has interviewed the artist for this Bulletin.

Planet Football brings life to the Gallery's balconies from 10 June to 16 July. Toured by the Goethe-Institut, it celebrates the global passion for football and features images from the legendary Magnum photography archive. The exhibition has already visited eighty countries, and is being shown in New Zealand only at our Gallery to coincide with the 2006 FIFA World Cup.

Our thanks to Grant Takle, whose work is featured in the new Contemporary Collections hang, for sitting for the Artist Profile in this issue.

In closing, may I thank all the Gallery's supporters, many of whom have also become personal friends during my time as Director, and I wish you and the Gallery every success in the future. I am sad to depart, but very proud to leave you with a cultural facility that is the envy of the rest of New Zealand!

THE GREATEST NEW ZEALAND PAINTING

CASS by Rita Angus

Cass c.1936 Rita Angus. Oil on canvas. Collection of the Gallery, purchased 1955. Reproduced courtesy of the Estate of Rita Angus

This painting of a small Canterbury railway station was voted the greatest New Zealand painting by viewers of arts television programme Frontseat. It topped a poll of paintings from galleries around the country to make the number one spot.

Cass displays Rita Angus's unique style of realism developed throughout the 1930s. The structured, formal composition is combined with the use of defined shapes, blocks of colour and a clear pervading light. Forms have been simplified, and constructed objects such as the station and timber stack are given an equal emphasis with the mountains in the background. A sense of the solitary nature of the region – Cass is located in the Southern Alps, 116 kilometres north-west of Christchurch – is captured through the depiction of a single isolated figure waiting on the platform.

On display in the Dame Louise Henderson Gallery.

SUMMER PROGRAMME COMING SOON!

The Gallery's new summer programme is about to be launched! Keep an eye out for details on our exciting array of exhibitions from New Zealand and around the world.

Gallery Designs Win Awards

The Gallery is delighted to announce that Bulletin has once again won the prestigious Museums Australia Publication Design Award for the best magazine of 2005 by an Australasian museum or gallery. Congratulations to Gallery partner Strategy Design & Advertising for consistently outstanding design work on Bulletin. The annual awards are peer reviewed, celebrating excellence in design and communication.

Strategy has scooped yet another award for their work with the Gallery – this time from America's prestigious Art Director's Club 85th Annual Awards. Judged by an international panel of the world's most respected creative professionals, the ADC Annual Awards honours the best design work from around the world. Selected from more than 11,000 entries worldwide, Strategy won the Pimp My Brand award for their work on the Gallery's Holiday Quiz tattoos for children, which include such favourites as Art Rocks, Eye Spy, Art Attack and the ever popular Arty Farty.

SEASON OF PHOTOGRAPHY

Our must-see exhibition Cecil Beaton: Portraits, the second in the Season of Photography series, promises to draw the crowds with its array of famous faces from the worlds of high society, fashion, literature and film. One of the world's most celebrated photographers, Cecil Beaton is renowned for his flamboyant sense of style and his eye for beauty and glamour.

The Gallery has a sensational array of related events on offer during the period – including classic movies, dancing demonstrations and a celebrity look-alike parade. See the Coming Events pages for details.

A range of special ticket offers will be made available, including two-for-one entry with coupons from The Press, and a free day. See The Press for more details.

Planet Football! 2006 World Cup at the Gallery

As part of the Planet Football exhibition, the Gallery is entering into the spirit of the 2006 FIFA World Cup by installing three huge plasma widescreen televisions in the Foyer to show live all games scheduled during the exhibition. Screening 24 hours a day, and visible from inside or outside the Gallery, a series of short films will run between games. See page 26 for more information on Planet Football.

15% OFF Shop Stocktake Sale

The Gallery Shop's winter stocktake sale is on for one day only. Get 15% discount off all your purchases all day on Wednesday 21 June.

Matariki / Winter Solstice

Celebrate Matariki and the winter solstice at the Gallery. Graham Bennett's celestial Reasons for Voyaging sculpture will complete a special 13-minute rotational cycle on the hour every hour from 10 am until 5 pm on Tuesday 27 June, and a range of special events will be held on Sunday 2 July.

Art Appreciation Course

The next course in the popular Insight art appreciation series for beginners starts in June, held over four consecutive Tuesday or Saturday mornings. The course explores portraiture, landscape painting, abstraction and contemporary art.

Courses start on Tuesday 6 June and Saturday 10 June. Course fee is $60. 12 participants per course, enrolment is essential. To enrol, or for further information, telephone 941 7342.

Dance at the Gallery

The Gallery brings two special dance events to the Foyer this winter. Footnote Dance presents Watch This Space, a unique fusion of contemporary dance and music on Wednesday 26 July at 6 pm. Beaton's Ballroom on Sunday 18 June at 2 pm celebrates the style and glamour of Cecil Beaton's high society world with a demonstration of ballroom dancing. See the Coming Events pages for more information.

Refreshing the Collections Hang Works on Paper

From 2 June, the works on paper hang in the Collections Galleries on the first floor will be refreshed with a new selection of artworks. The new display will continue to enhance and complement the Gallery's historical and twentieth century collection paintings. Formerly reserved for watercolours, the works on paper bays are divided into several areas covering nineteenth and twentieth century Canterbury, New Zealand and international artists.

Highlights include three watercolours by Rita Angus, including her 1942 still-life flower study Irises. Also on view for the first time are William Fox's Guards Bay & Rangiwai's grave, Port Underwood (see the Recent Acquisition pages for more information on this work) and Petrus van der Velden's excellent watercolour, Marken Funeral Barge, part of the artist's Marken funeral series of the early 1870s. Other highlights include four of Colin McCahon's Northland drawings, from the artist's Northland series of 1958/59.

ART FOR FAMILIES

See the Coming Events pages for more events for families.

Animals with Attitude Children's Workshops

Children are invited to the Gallery during the July school holidays to take part in fun workshops making papier maché animals with attitude! Animals will be let loose on display in the Gallery Foyer throughout KidsFest 06 – all visitors are welcome.

Workshops are offered daily, 3–7 July, from 10 am – 2 pm. You can join in at any time. There is a workshop fee of $2 per child to cover materials. For more information, please telephone 941 7342.

Kids in Town

Every Thursday lunchtime, the Gallery hosts Kids in Town. Children from primary schools around Christchurch entertain visitors with performances by choirs, Kapa Haka groups, Pacific Culture groups, orchestras and dance troupes. See the Coming Events pages for dates and times.

School Holiday Programme

The new holiday quiz for the July school holidays is Fuzzy Friends, with fun activities for children looking at animals in art. The quiz introduces children to the many skills associated with making and looking at art. Fuzzy Friends is ideal for family groups and children aged 4–12 years, and is available daily from 1–16 July, 10 am – 4 pm. The quiz is free, and can be picked up at the Information Desk.

Update: Paradigm Shift

Change is always difficult. It takes us from our comfort zone and challenges us to think without the constraint of familiar boundaries. And that is exactly what happened last December with Christchurch City Council's review of operations at Christchurch Art Gallery Te Puna o Waiwhetu. It generated considerable debate, but more importantly got people talking and thinking about their Gallery.

Not prepared to accept falling visitor numbers and an exhibition programme that was labelled by museum experts Ken Gorbey and Tim Walker as "polite, low-paced and not rebellious enough", the Council decided it was time to put a new canvas on the wall and paint a future that delivered a dynamic new programme and attracted more than 400,000 visitors annually, by 2009.

There was a fear of the unknown as this was put in front of stakeholders. This was not done in isolation but rather acknowledged the success of the new Gallery in its first thirty months of operation, at the same time recognising the need to build on this strength and expand visitor numbers by attracting new audiences. We had experienced a magnificent opening phase, but it was simply time to look to the future.

No institution can afford to rest on its laurels. Worldwide, galleries and museums are faced with falling numbers and having to reinvent themselves to engage new and enlarged audiences. This is despite an ever-growing number of visitors and tourists. There is much competition for their discretionary time, and it is only those institutions that appeal to a wider community base with their exhibition programme that will prosper. Christchurch Art Gallery has responded early to this challenge.

Christchurch should be proud of its Gallery. There is much to celebrate: a magnificent building, a well-trained and professional staff, a significant collection preserving the legacy of artistic achievement in Canterbury and New Zealand and a supportive community that not only gave so much to build the new facility but who remain passionate about their Gallery. With the Paradigm Shift, Christchurch has given its residents one of the greatest gifts – the opportunity to shape and mould its art institution – and stakeholders have embraced it with enthusiasm. What has come through strongly is a real ownership of the Gallery, and that is important to secure a prosperous future. Not everyone will agree on the new direction, but that is okay.

We now have a new vision for our Gallery. This is to take a key leadership role in making Worcester Boulevard and the Cultural Precinct the most visited cultural tourism site in New Zealand. It is a logical lead. The Gallery has an iconic building strategically located at the heart of the Cultural Precinct and through its programme invites visitors to expand their cultural horizons and enrich their senses.

As we celebrate the city's creative spirit by expanding the public's perception of art, we will commit to new audiences, building a stimulating visitor experience that puts Christchurch Art Gallery on the itinerary of every visitor to the city as the 'must-see' attraction. Throughout March and early April, we consulted our stakeholders, seeking their input and ideas in helping create the new programme of exhibitions and events to reinforce the vision. They were honest with their feedback, which was appreciated, and shared a wealth of ideas that will form part of the plan.

Among stakeholder suggestions have been bringing to life the Sculpture Garden on Montreal Street with artwork, introducing a space for the exhibition of contemporary/emerging artists with a quick turnover of work, creating a vibrant environment within the courtyard and foyer area and getting the Gallery more involved with local festivals. We thank everyone who contributed; your feedback was invaluable in helping shape the new face of the Gallery.

Christchurch Art Gallery has a new vision – the first step on the road to the Paradigm Shift. While the vision capitalises on the facility's strength within the Cultural Precinct, it is the support, passion and enthusiasm of the community that will guarantee a strong future. Change will not be instant but rather progressively introduced during the next five years. There is already a new energy of excitement and anticipation reverberating within the Gallery. Be part of the future – mark a visit to the Gallery in your diary on 10 June and experience Planet Football. It will be a taste of the future.

The Press, 5 April 2006.

You'll be hearing more from the Gallery soon regarding the exciting new summer programme of exhibitions, which promises to cater for all tastes.

Vision of Christchurch Art Gallery

Christchurch Art Gallery Te Puna o Waiwhetu will take a key leadership role in making Christchurch's Cultural Precinct the most visited cultural tourism site in New Zealand.

We are ideally placed to take this lead with our iconic building, strategic location at the heart of the Cultural Precinct and our programmes inviting visitors to live the Precinct's core values of expanding cultural horizons and enriching senses.

We want to grow the public's perception of art as we commit to new audiences by building a new, stimulating visitor experience and develop the brand.

We recognise our key audiences are the families/whanau of Christchurch, international visitors to our City, domestic visitors, educational groups and special audiences.

The Gallery strives to connect people with art – emotionally and intellectually. We celebrate art and the creative spirit. We know where we stand and we have global reach.

We educate, inspire discovery and preserve the legacy of artistic achievement for the people of Canterbury and New Zealand through collecting, presenting, interpreting and conserving quality works of art.

We want to be recognised locally, nationally and internationally as innovative, with quality collections and programmes, and for the enjoyment and appreciation of art it brings all its audiences. We will set a standard of excellence in all our endeavours.

THE GLAMOROUS WORLDS OF FASHION, ART & FILM
MEET IN THIS MAJOR INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION OF THE PORTRAITS OF SIR CECIL BEATON.

MAKING CAMP CECIL BEATON

Andrew Paul Wood explores behind the scenes.

“I adore simple pleasures, they are the last refuge of the complex.”
Oscar Wilde, A Woman of No Importance (1893)

Cecil Beaton (1904–1980) was one of the world’s most celebrated photographers. He is remembered as a leading society and fashion photographer, and that stereotypical product of English class-consciousness: a tenacious social climber. To whit, as a young man he harboured a burning desire to dine at the Eiffel Tower because, “the people who go there are smart, arty, and the set I must get in with”. Beaton was a gifted networker, and soon he was working for Vogue and Vanity Fair.

The allure of Beaton is the mutability of his façade, and the enigma of what lay behind it. It is not a cliché to describe him as one of the last of the dilettanti – a talented painter, writer, designer, illustrator, and of course one of the great celebrity portrait photographers (although he always regarded this as something of a minor arrow in his quiver). He virtually invented the glamour shot, and somehow managed to surf the vicissitudes of fame and fashion from the Bright Young Things of the roaring twenties to the Rolling Stones in the swinging sixties (a full circle in many ways), from Buckingham Palace to Hollywood.

“HE VIRTUALLY INVENTED THE GLAMOUR SHOT.”

“To be natural is such a very difficult pose to keep up.” Oscar Wilde, An Ideal Husband (1895)
“Camp sees everything in quotation marks.” Susan Sontag, Notes on Camp (1964)

Beaton’s sensibilities form a bridge between the aestheticism of Oscar Wilde and the celebrity worship of Andy Warhol. It is a kind of ‘Camp’ – that which Susan Sontag described as “failed seriousness” – it is camp of a complex, rich and deliberate sort, tinged with a love of absurdity, artifice and surrealism, a creative pastiche of crinkled cellophane backgrounds mingled freely with mannered Old Master poses. Beaton’s genius lay not in his photographic skills, but his instinctive ability to synthesise successful pastiche from this mélange.

Behind the effete posturing, sexual ambiguity and occasional dalliances in frocks was the steely, waspish will of a tenacious social climber forever ashamed of his nouveau riche origins. It was this which informed his ability to idealise even the most inbred aristo, to home in on and flatter their best features, wickedly pun on their weaknesses, and superimpose himself in their world with the judicious use of mirrors, while at all times remaining the respectful genuflecting courtier.

Susan Sontag pointed out in ‘Notes on Camp’ that, while nothing in nature can be campy, and most camp is urban, there is still such a thing as Rural Camp – manmade, and with the serenity or naiveté of pastoral. One of Beaton’s favourite reoccurring motifs (along with harlequinades and posing his subjects as corpses) was the fête-champêtre of the rural idle, with his friends as figures from paintings by Fragonard and Titian. More specifically he was drawn to the artifice of the fantasy – the urban/urbane snob’s fantasy of the rural retreat, Watteau shepherds gambolling on the parterre and Marie-Antoinette dressing up in a silk-and-brocade milkmaid costume at the Petit Trianon while the peasants starved beyond the walls. It is the Rococo fantasy of the Locus Amoenus – a delightful grove of wit, beauty and flirtation insulated from the realities of the world.

Beaton first explored this as a young man, with his dress-up pictures of Rex Whistler and the Sitwells on the sunlit lawns of Stephen Tennant’s house at Wilsford, and at his own home, Ashcombe, in Wiltshire during the 1920s and 1930s. It resonates in his portraits of the poisonous divorcee Wallis Simpson in the gardens of the Château de Candé, or Elizabeth, the Queen Consort (later the Queen Mum) standing by an enormous marble urn at Windsor.

This version of souped-up rural simplicity combined with glamorous photographs of the Royal Family proved to be useful propaganda during the war, cushioning the injured British soul from the horrors of the Blitz with a peculiarly English kind of patriotic escapism.

Beaton’s love of theatricality began early. As a child he obsessively collected picture postcards of the stage actresses of the day, and constructed elaborate sets for his beloved toy theatre. Later he would greatly admire Ballets Russ dancer Lydia Lopokva for her “Marionette quality”, likening her to a wax doll. He would later use the marionette simile to describe the British model Twiggy.

Beaton allowed this passion for the epicure and artificial to flourish like kudzu in his elaborate design work for the movies Gigi (1957) and My Fair Lady (1964). In Gigi, one can barely see the coquettes for the decadent tropical triffids of the mock Art Nouveau sets, and the enormous Edwardian lampshade hats are virtually characters themselves. It is what John Summerson has called “the craving for the aedicule” Maurice Chevalier’s character lives in rooms that appear part brothel, part Mogul palace, overwrought with velvet and stylised peacocks. In My Fair lady, Mrs Higgins tells off Pygmalionesque son Henry for “playing with your live doll”! It is an apt admonishment for Beaton too – in his world people were things to be directed and manipulated in exotic stage sets of his conception.

“THE BEATON PORTRAIT IS AN AMAZING THING. HE POSSESSED THE MOST REMARKABLE ABILITY TO DRAW OUT THE ESSENTIAL QUALITIES OF A SITTER’S CHARACTER AND GLAMORISE THEM.”

Princess Elizabeth 1942 Cecil Beaton.
National Portrait Gallery, London

Beaton’s most compelling portraits explore his fascination with androgeneity – the implacably butch Gertrude Stein, and the waifish gamin Audrey Hepburn. Beaton himself frequently attended costume balls in drag and appeared en traveste in a Cambridge production of The Duchess of Malfi in 1924. A favourite subject of Beaton’s, Greta Garbo (to whom the avowedly homosexual photographer once proposed) was the apotheosis of the androgynous ideal. During their long and complex flirtation, Garbo would occasionally refer to herself as Beaton’s “boy”. Marlene Dietrich was another androgyne – as Kenneth Tynan observed in Beaton’s book Persona Grata (1953), she possessed “sex without gender”. Beaton described Mick Jagger as “completely sexless. He could nearly be a eunuch.” While this was intended as a high compliment, it is difficult to imagine the implacably virile king of sex, drugs and rock-n-roll taking it as such.

“It’s absurd to divide people into good and bad. People are either charming or tedious.” Oscar Wilde, Lady Windermere’s Fan (1892)

Beaton imperiously defined society with his lens, and an eye that was both waspish and kindly by turns. He was a compulsive social climber – never having recovered from his ill-placed shame at having a father who was a self-made man. This is perhaps the ultimate vanity, as it was his father’s lumber wealth that allowed Beaton to play the dilettante and indulge his whimsical fancy.

No one did more to re-brand the Windsors after the abdication of Edward VIII, demonstrating once and for all the power of publicity and the media over the public consciousness. Beaton’s photographs of Elizabeth, the Queen Consort, seamlessly smoothed the abrupt succession by extolling her great charm and appeal.

The aristocracy of the twentieth century looked to Beaton as their Van Dyck. To many he was the Royal photographer of the war period. His photographs of the coronation of Elizabeth II have become the legitimising public collective memory of the inauguration of the Second Elizabethan Age. He made the young Elizabeth our Gloriana, just as Spencer did with her namesake. Beaton was also quick to catch on to the Windsor’s desire to be portrayed as having as normal a family life as their subjects, humanising them and making them seem less distant.

During his four visits to Hollywood, starting in the early 1930s, Beaton discovered a new American aristocracy, the pantheon of the silver screen, which he snapped, drenched in California sun. In his lens, Garbo’s face is translated into a silver moon that transcends mere portraiture. Paradoxically, his treatment of movie stars seems to be quite the opposite of the socially in-the-know way he depicted the British ruling classes.

The Beaton portrait is an amazing thing. He possessed the most remarkable ability to draw out the essential qualities of a sitter’s character and glamorise them. Having known Cocteau and various Surrealists, he employed many of their ideas in setting up the scene with furbelows and bits of random bric-a-brac, but the sitter underneath is always him or herself – even if they are dressed as a Moorish prince or Edwardian debutant. It anticipates similar tableaux in the work of contemporary photographers such as Pierre et Gilles, Robert Mapplethorpe, Richard Avedon, Herb Ritts and many others.

There was always a bit of bitchy irony in Beaton's work, particularly in the early years – Churchill looks particularly like a British bulldog, Picasso looks like a suited businessman rather than the pre-eminent painter of the twentieth century. This vitriolic streak was largely burned out of him like a tic by his experiences as an official war photographer travelling in the Middle East, capturing the last days and fading glories of an Orientalist Brideshead Revisited. By the end of his career, formal and compositional values were the important aspect of his craft, when he really became an artist. Sadly though, although he had celebrity cachet, snapping worthies of the day like Mick Jagger and Andy Warhol (so like him in life and aspiration), his artistic vision was something of an anachronism. He remained throughout his life an Edwardian dandy in his own mind, and a basilisk whistling away in its cave to a world he was rapidly falling out of step with.

“Life is too important a thing ever to talk seriously about it.” Oscar Wilde, Vera, or The Nihilists (1880)

Grant Takle

Grant Takle's paintings bristle with references to New Zealand's history and culture, presenting an intense and often unsettling examination of our national identity. Richly loaded with visual and verbal puns, their aggressive imagery and abrupt juxtapositions offer a bracing riposte to the current climate of political correctness.

Born and based in Christchurch, Takle trained at the University of Canterbury School of Fine Arts and has exhibited regularly over two decades in solo and group exhibitions throughout New Zealand. His work is represented in several major public collections.

The Gallery owns five works by Takle. The most recently acquired, No Smoking (2005), is part of the new hang in the Contemporary Collections Gallery.

You figured out a specific system of painting early in your career. Is this system reinvented for each series that you start? Is this still part of the way you are working?

There is actually not one system governing all series. At the start there is always the notion of a scheme for a specific series, and within this structure I read and respond to the work in progress allowing it to take me on a journey rather than over-determining the outcome. I want to work with the unfamiliar too, so I try not to bind myself to a way of thinking. Each work intuitively comes out of the previous one. It may be an elaboration or even a critique of it.

The new component of the exhibition – Gargantua's Petticoat – is still in progress at the moment.

Yes, Gargantua's Petticoat will be a painting installation and is fueled by earlier works that feature in the exhibition – quite possibly all of them. It also relates to aspects of Gobsmack & Flabbergast, but is more graphic. They are like women and torsos, abstracted, big panels, that are a mix of formal abstraction and the surreal – the two positions I tend to move between. I don't want to say too much about it yet before the exhibition... I'd like to keep it as a surprise.

Planet Football (Weltsprache Fussball)

10 JUNE > 16 JULY

Planet Football's world tour finishes in New Zealand! Showing exclusively at the Gallery, this exhibition of football images from the world's finest photography agency, Magnum, has toured eighty countries around the globe!

Football is the world's most popular sport – it is played by hundreds of millions and watched by billions of people around the world. It has been described as the people's sport because it speaks a universal language. All around the world, the game of football transcends the barriers of culture, religion, social standing and politics.

Timed to coincide with the FIFA World Cup 2006, this exhibition of photographs reveals how football can build bridges around the world. From mosque courtyards to middle-class English gardens, football stadiums and refugee camps, Planet Football is a photographic exhibition that celebrates the world of football – great moments on and off the soccer field.

This exhibition has been created by the Goethe-Institut in Germany in conjunction with world-renowned photography agency Magnum Photos. It includes works by such photographers as Henri Cartier-Bresson, Abbas, Chris Steele-Perkins, Luc Delahaye, Josef Koudelka, Brice Gilden, Susan Meiselas, Martin Parr and Marc Riboud, and has toured eighty countries around the world before coming to New Zealand.

Weltsprache Fussball / Planet Football is on the balconies from 10 June to 16 July. An exhibition by the Goethe-Institut, conceived in cooperation with MAGNUM PHOTOS.

room with a view by Kirsten Haydon

11 AUGUST – 3 DECEMBER

Melbourne-based jeweller Kirsten Haydon brings an interactive installation of jewellery object art to the Gallery in room with a view. Kirsten was an Antarctic Arts Fellow in 2004, and this exhibition resulted from her experiences in Antarctica and her research into the role souvenirs and jewellery play in society.

The purpose of Kirsten's journey to Antarctica was to produce a collection of jewellery that related to the landscape, flora and fauna, and to expand upon her knowledge of the history of objects and wearable souvenirs. As she says, "Jewellery, historically, is a personal and sentimental medium. Many objects were fashioned in the form of miniature representations of landscapes and icons and have been used to remind people of journeys and experiences." Displayed in a darkened section of the gallery space and viewed by torchlight, Kirsten's new works are created from luminous visy beads used in road paint fired into enamel at high temperatures to form reflective objects— an optical illusion visible in the dark. Juxtaposed is a video projection of a journey in a Hagland (Antarctic transport vehicle) that combines Kirsten's interest in ideas of exploration with a new way of viewing object art. Other pieces displayed in an adjoining space are enamel geometric shapes, some with delicate drawings of landscape fragments and sea animals. The role of memory in the production, reception and use of jewellery and objects is another aspect of her practice highlighted in this exhibition. By engaging viewers to explore her work on an intimate level, the notion of remembered landscapes can be projected onto the jewellery while Kirsten's own direct experience of Antarctica can also be contemplated.

GUARDS BAY & RANGIAWA'S GRAVE, PORT UNDERWOOD

William Fox

Guards Bay & Rangiawa's grave, Port Underwood 1848 William Fox. Watercolour. Donated by Christchurch City Libraries, 2005

An important watercolour painting, Guards Bay & Rangiawa's grave, Port Underwood by William Fox (1812–1893) was recently discovered in the Christchurch City Libraries Archives and generously donated to the Gallery. Completed by Fox in 1848, this work is one of the most significant additions to the historical collection in recent years. Shown here prior to conservation, it is now the earliest New Zealand painting in the permanent collection.

Located on the east coast of Marlborough Sounds, Port Underwood was home to a thriving whaling industry in the 1830s and 1840s. As an agent for the New Zealand Company, Fox visited and sketched in the area during December 1847 while in the process of selecting a suitable port for the Wairau district. His recommendation for Picton (Waitohi) was eventually approved. In the foreground, the grave of Kuita Rangiawa (Ngati Toa), wife of James Wynen, is seen with a sweeping view across Port Underwood from above Guards Bay. The bay was named after John Guard, a prominent trader and whaler in the area at the time, but is today known as Kakapo Bay.

Fox was an important early artist-surveyor who emigrated to New Zealand from Britain in 1842. He was employed as a resident agent for the New Zealand Company, which enabled him to travel and record many remote regions of the country. Today, his paintings from the 1840s in particular provide important records of New Zealand during this period.

This work is on display in the Sir Robertson & Lady Stewart Gallery.

President's Letter

It is with sadness that we say goodbye to our Gallery Director, Tony Preston. As a member of the Friends, and as our liaison with the Gallery, he has always been generous with his time, support and advice in a charming way. We have admired his enthusiasm and inspirational drive within the Canterbury community in providing the region with our magnificent Gallery. He will be missed. To mark his outstanding service to the Gallery we were pleased to present him with an Honorary Life Membership.

As Friends, we support the Gallery as it goes forward into an exciting future. All members were invited to attend a meeting on 15 March to discuss the Gallery's 'paradigm shift'; a summary report can be sent on request to any interested member.

We have an exciting programme of events over this quarter, including weekend activities. I hope to see you there!

Helen Peate

HELEN PEATE
 President

Annual General Meeting

At the AGM on 30 March the committee for 2006 was elected. It comprises Helen Peate (President), Margaret Luisetti (Vice President), Cheryl Comfort (Secretary), Brent Bruce (Treasurer), Terry Bennett, Jocelyn Gilchrist, Marianne Hargreaves, Peter Bannan, Paul Deans, Corallyn Newman and Dorle Pauli. Patrons Don Peebles, Lady Judith Hay and Lady Diana Isaac were re-elected. In recognition of their service to the Friends, Honorary Life Memberships were given to former president Mark Stocker and committee members June Goldstein and Rebecca Garside.

Previews

Friends are invited to preview new exhibitions before they open to the public. Where possible, a curator or other expert will introduce the exhibitions between 4.15 and 4.45 pm. For entry, please present your Friends membership card. Friends are invited to meet at 3.30 pm in the upstairs reception room for a social coffee or tea before the preview.

Wellington Trip

Enjoy a weekend with Friends in Wellington, visiting the exhibition 'Constable, Impressions of Land, Sea and Sky' at Te Papa in September. We will also visit Pataka Museum, take a peek at private collections, visit City Gallery Wellington and take a tour of the amazing collection of public sculpture in this vibrant city. See the enclosed flyer for details, or telephone (03) 941 7356.

Friends Scholarship

The Friends annual scholarship recipients for 2006 are Melissa Reimer and Sam Harrison. Both received cheques for $1500 and a year's membership to the Friends.

Melissa, winner of the University of Canterbury scholarship, is in her fourth year of an Honours degree in Art History and English Literature. Before university, Melissa spent three years abroad, and her research is on the museums and galleries she visited. Her ambition is to be an art curator.

Sam received the Christchurch Polytechnic Institute of Technology Scholarship. He is in his final year of a bachelor degree in art and design. Last year Sam achieved his goal of having a solo exhibition before he turned twenty, and sold all but two of twenty-one works on the opening night.

Weekday Events

Studio visits: Stephanie Crisp and Leah Fraser Henderson

WEDNESDAY, 14 JUNE, 10 AM

Full-time painter Stephanie Crisp won the 2005 Christchurch Telecom White Pages Art Award – her artwork is on the cover of the current directory. For this work, she used embroidery to intensify the surface qualities of the landscape. Stephanie recently moved to Governors Bay from the Waikato, where she was a leading member of the art community. Visit www.stephaniecrisp.co.nz for more information.

Maximum 20 members. Please meet Corallyn Newman outside 26B Cornwall Road, Lyttelton, at 9.50 am.

Diamond Harbour School and the Champion Centre at Burwood Hospital are just two of the places where Leah Fraser Henderson's sculptures are on public display. With experience as a trade-qualified structural welder, her sculptures are unique, including water features and commissions in stainless steel, metal, wood, concrete and stone for private homes and public spaces. Visit www.artistree.co.nz for more information.

Maximum 20 members. Please meet Corallyn Newman outside 90 Waipapa Avenue, Diamond Harbour, at 12.50 pm.

The cost for the two visits is $5. Additional costs include return fare on the ferry (metro cards accepted) from Lyttelton to Diamond Harbour and a light lunch at Godley House. We will catch the ferry at 12 noon and return at 3 pm. Transport will be provided in Diamond Harbour. If you wish to visit only one artist, please make that clear when you book (cost $5).

Studio visit: Denise Gaffikin

MONDAY, 17 JULY, 10.30 AM

Painter Denise Gaffikin's first solo exhibition was a near sell-out, and in 2005 she was a top-selling original artist at the Bryce Gallery in Christchurch. She also exhibits in Queenstown, Hanmer, Akaroa and Motueka. From a career in mental health nursing, Denise became a self-taught artist. Her work is inspired by the Marlborough Sounds and Canterbury, and influenced by her love of symmetry.

Maximum 20 members. Please meet Corallyn Newman outside 304C Yaldhurst Road, at 10.20 am.

Reach for the Sky (detail) 2006 Denise Gaffikin. Mixed media acrylic on canvas. Private collection

Studio visit: Lucy Mhoma

WEDNESDAY, 16 AUGUST, 10.30 AM

Painter and Sculptor Lucy Mhoma emigrated to New Zealand from Scotland as a child. She has travelled extensively and developed her skills as a sculptor in Edinburgh, Australia, Europe and Africa, including working with the Shone artists at Tengenege sculpture community in Zimbabwe and studying at the Tom Bass Sculpture School in Sydney. Her paintings and sculptures have a spiritual quality and aim to evoke a positive emotional response.

Maximum 20 members. Please meet Corallyn Newman outside 11 Blakes Road, Prebbleton, at 10.20 am.

Weekend Events

Studio visit: John Coley

SATURDAY, 22 JULY, 11 AM

Visit the studio of well-known Canterbury artist, journalist and author, John Coley. View his paintings and hear him talk on his recent trip to Sicily.

Diane Burgess May Smith: Colourist – Modernist – Feminist?

WEDNESDAY, 21 JUNE

Few people today are aware of May Smith's art-historical significance, or of the brief high visibility she enjoyed in Auckland's art world of the 1940s, when she was appreciated by the avant-garde. Smith brought what she learned in London in the 1930s, when she came under the influence of Frances Hodgkins and others, to wartime New Zealand, where her brand of modernism stood out boldly amid the outmoded painting styles still clinging to the nineteenth century.

Diane Burgess has a masters degree in art history from the University of Canterbury. May Smith was the research subject for her thesis.

Areta Wilkinson Kai Tahu He Iti Ra, He Iti Mapihi Pounamu: My jewellery practice 1992–2006

WEDNESDAY, 19 JULY

Translated, 'He Iti Ra, He Iti Mapihi Pounamu' says 'I may be small but I am an ornament of greenstone'. Originally adopted as a private reminder of personal strength, the proverb implies the mana of the small wearable object. Jewellery is the perfect medium to create a mark of identity. Maori artist and jeweller Areta Wilkinson says, "My work is a response to the world around me. The esoteric or the abstract connections – to the land, to family or to the past are very much present. It is my aim to produce beautiful works of small power speaking from Aotearoa. These in turn engage in a larger global conversation around practices of identity."

Warren Feeny: An Introduction to the Art Collection of the Canterbury Society of Arts Charitable Trust 1881–2006

WEDNESDAY, 16 AUGUST

Warren Feeny, Director of CoCA, is currently completing post-graduate research on the history of the CSA, whose permanent collection was established in 1881 as the public art collection for Christchurch. In 1932 the Society gifted 125 works to the city, founding the public collection for the Robert McDougall Art Gallery. Now, these works make up a significant proportion of the historical section of the Christchurch Art Gallery's collection. Warren's introduction to the CSA's collection provides an overview of its development, changes in policy and its current relevance as CoCA's collection.

Grahame Sydney: 32 years of solitary confinement

WEDNESDAY, 2 AUGUST

Philip Carter Family Auditorium, 6.00 pm

The Friends present a special lecture by artist Grahame Sydney. This is an important opportunity to hear one of New Zealand's most popular artists, and will raise money for the acquisitions programme at the Gallery.

Grahame says, "It's 32 years since I began as a nervous full-time painter in Dunedin, when the art world was a very small mouse compared to the beast it is now [...] My children are adults and making their own way far from me, and my life, with its lurches and twists, continues to surprise me as much as it does others. I am currently engaged in painting, mainly oils, and the new challenges of filmmaking, for which I have to be both an artistic eye and a writer." Grahame will talk about the things he considers crucial in making judgments about paintings, as well as the evolution of his work.

Tickets $25 per person. See enclosed flier for details, or telephone (03) 941 7356. All attendees will go in the draw for a reproduction of one of Grahame's works, the winner to be announced after the lecture.
