84th
Annual Exhibition of the Canterbury Society of Arts

I extend to you a welcome to the exhibition. The members of your council who form the judging and hanging committee have an interesting task but not an easy one. You will find all sections of art represented and it is good to think that an exhibition of this quality can be formed from the work submitted.

John and Tanya Drawbridge

John and Tanya Drawbridge, now living in Wellington, have recently returned from Europe, where they have studied and worked for the last few years.

A National Art Gallery scholarship, awarded in 1957, enabled John Drawbridge to resign his position as a lecturer at Wellington Training College and move to London to begin studying print making at the Central School of Arts and Crafts. At this time Tanya was studying silver-smithing. On the completion of their courses they were married and later moved to Paris where they continued working and experimenting within abstract fields of art and design. At this stage Tanya began to extend her range of media to include stone and marble.

In 1962 John was commissioned to paint a 50 ft mural in oils to decorate the main reception hall of New Zealand House in London, and this painting now provides a synthesis of New Zealand's topography for all visitors to the building.

Back in his home town, John Drawbridge has taken up a teaching post at Wellington Polytechnic, while Tanya, working under her maiden name of Tanya Ashken, aims to develop a studio. Here she will continue carving and producing jewellery, incorporating New Zealand stones.
