

21st National Exhibition NZ Society of Potters

Anne McCartney

22 Oct - 19 Nov 1978 Waikato Art Museum Investment House London Street Hamilton

Foreword

Composing the foreword to the catalogue of a national exhibition is always a daunting affair, especially so when one realises that, at the time of writing, the exhibition as such does not yet exist, and in fact, that some of the pots that will give it life and substance are still "in utero" (or at least cooling down in their kilns).

Since I'm not able to say anything about the exhibition in detail, perhaps it would be best to attempt to give the public an explanation of the reasons why the Society has chosen to employ the format that has been used for the first time with this exhibition. Then they, the potters, the selectors and the critics will be able to determine whether or not the change has achieved the effects we sought.

As before, each Society member has been able to submit five pieces or sets for the exhibition. This year, and this is the innovation, each potter had the right to nominate one piece to be exhibited as his own choice. Unlike the rest of his submission, this piece would not have to undergo the selection process with the panel of three selectors.

Four years ago, the Society conducted a totally unselected exhibition, in the belief that such an exhibition would show the public and the potters a full range of the best work being done by Society members. As a result, the exhibition was so overwhelming in its scale that most people were unable to come to terms with the pots themselves. Although it had its high points, its quality was seriously impaired, in particular, by several large and spectacularly abominable pieces.

Since then the Society has reverted to exhibitions that have been entirely selected, and this process also appears to have its drawbacks. Many members of the Society believed that the levels of selection had been set too high, and that the "atmosphere" within the Society was becoming more competitive that co-operative. Our critics also observed that some of our most vital pots, and potters, had disappeared from the exhibition scene, so that the national exhibitions were lacking in diversity and vitality because only the "safe" pots were left. It was even said that institutionalising of standards could lead to the institutionalising of creativity.

As you will have realised by now, this exhibition has been structured so as to effect a compromise between the two extremes of all selection and no selection, and through this balance, to achieve the three essential elements of diversity, vitality and quality. A rather ambitious set of goals? I hope at least that you will find the process of determining whether any or all of these aims have been achieved in this exhibition an enjoyable one.
